TC105: Complaints Handling

Trainer: Lesley Horton – Deputy Ombudsman TPO

The property business is a people business, and good business means you will deal with a range of people. Inevitably some of those people will be dissatisfied and will make complaints.

Dealing with complaints effectively is a key business skill that often gets overlooked. If complaints are poorly handled, complainants become more disgruntled – taking up valuable time and resources of organisations. An effective complaints process aims to deal with complaints quickly and efficiently, identifying root causes and taking effective action to win back the confidence of the complainant.

The aim of this course is to help you and your team understand how best to deal with complaints to repair the relationship between your organisation and the complainant, so that great customer relations can be built and maintained.

BOOK NOW  Spring/Summer Date
8th July – 10am to 12:30pm

TC111: Managing Mixed Use Developments

Trainers: Michael Maunder-Taylor/Bruce Maunder-Taylor – Maunder Taylor

Residential and commercial management: an excellent knowledge of one does not imply a competence to handle the other. The expectations and perceptions of commercial occupiers are often very different from those of the residential occupiers, and a Landlord whose main interest is receiving rent from commercial occupiers has yet different objectives and perspectives. These must all be understood. This six hour course run over two online sessions will provide hard won industry advice and practical training to deal with the conflicting demands and legal set ups of Leasehold and Commercial buildings

Content

What the course covers:

- Different Lease Terms for commercial or residential properties.
- Different expectations of commercial and residential tenants.
- When Landlords try to maximise their rental return.
- Different service charge proportions and the effective of “fair and reasonable”
- VAT complications.
- Finding compromise between self-interested commercial and self-interested residential tenants.
- Standards of repairs and reserve fund considerations when commercial tenants have short leases and residential tenants have long leases.
- Nuisances; noise, scaffolding, guests, visitors and car parking.
- Covenant enforcement and Dispute Resolution.

RESIDENTIAL LEASEHOLD COURSES

TC114: An Introduction to Being an RMC/RTM Director

Trainers: Shabnam Ali-Khan (Partner and Head of Enfranchisement at Russel Cooke) / Alan Walker (RMC Director with 20 years' experience and former member of ARMA's Regulatory Panel)

If you are a Director of a Residents' Management Company (RMC) or Right to Manage Company (RTM), or thinking of becoming a director, this course is for you.

RMCs/RTMs are companies which own and run blocks of flats. Each flat owner is typically a member or shareholder in the RMC and members are appointed from amongst their number to become Directors. The RMCs are then run by these Directors.

The duties of the company towards each Leaseholder are set out in the Leases for each flat. There is a mix of contractual duties, such as repairs, maintenance, insurance, and service charge accounting, and statutory duties, including setting reasonable levels of service charges and consulting on major works.

The aim of this course is to help you understand the different elements involved in being a director and develop how you carry out the role.

For further information and help on booking your RMC/RTM directors on the course, please email training@tpi.org.uk

BOOK NOW  Spring/Summer Date

TC98: Granting Consent and Licenses To Alter

Trainers: Richard Bagwell – Stephens Scown /Barnaby Hope – Selborne Chambers

Property managers dealing with leasehold properties will often be faced with situations where a leaseholder has asked for permission to carry out work to their flat, or to sub-let the flat to another person, or even for permission to have an animal in the property. They will also have to deal with cases where a leaseholder has not asked for permission but has just gone ahead and done something forbidden by their lease. Knowing when permission is required and the basis for giving or refusing consent is an important part of residential leasehold management.

Course Contents

This is often a hotly disputed area and it has recently led to a Supreme Court decision that all property managers need to be aware of when dealing with requests. This 3 hour half day course will cover:

- When is consent needed?
- Alterations – structural and non-structural
- Sub-letting
- Animals
- Reasonableness of refusing consent
- Disability and Equality Act 2010
- Requests for consent where an RTM company is operating
- Drawing up a licence

BOOK NOW  Spring/Summer Date
12th June – 1pm to 2pm

LEGAL

W11: Dealing with Section 20b – “The 18-Month Rule”

Trainer: Cassandra Zanelli – PMLS

There is a raft of contractual and statutory restrictions on the recovery of service charges, and failures to comply can result in lessees withholding payment of service charges. In some cases, the effects are suspensory, and failures can be corrected. In other cases, failures are fatal to the recovery of those service charges. Failing to comply with Section 20B (or the so-called 18-month rule) can result in stale (and unrecoverable) service charges; something all managing agents want to avoid.

In this webinar, we'll explore the 18-month rule in some detail and look at what it means for managing agents in practice. We'll consider the latest case law on this topic and offer some practical guidance for agents to try and avoid stale service charges.

BOOK NOW  Spring/Summer Date
12th June – 1pm to 2pm

W14: Deeds of Variations: A Practical Guide for Property Managers

Trainer: Georgia Ball – PMLS

Are you a property manager facing an increased number of requests for deeds of variation?

In this session, we'll explore the reasons behind the requests, together a discussion around the common types of requests for variation sought by both leaseholders and owners of freehold properties, including the increased demand for mortgage protection clauses.

We'll consider steps involved in varying leases (and transfers), and an overview of the process involved from the point of view of managing agents. We'll also consider the frequent requests made to cancel, add and/or amend restrictions.

BOOK NOW  Spring/Summer Date

TC103: Property Transfers – Implications for Property Managers

Trainer: Cassandra Zanelli – PMLS

Leasehold properties change hands on a regular basis. During the life of a lease, the leasehold interest is likely to be sold, transferred or otherwise disposed of. The lease will set out the requirements that outgoing (and incoming) lessees need to adhere to.

In this course, we'll cover:

- Identifying the responsibilities of the conveyancer
- Locating and interpreting the specific lease covenants relating to transfers of property, identifying the actions required by the relevant parties (e.g. property managers, conveyancers, leaseholders, etc.), including identifying the requirements for/compliance with:
 - Licences to assign
 - Deeds of Covenant
 - Certificates to satisfy restrictions at the Land Registry
- Completing LPE1 and LPE2 documents
- Notices of transfer and/or charge
- Stock transfer forms and issuing new share certificates (including dealing with lost certificates)
- Ensure all charges due are accounted for and paid to the point of transfer (including any remedial action if an account is not cleared)
- Dealing with possible year-end deficits/credits
- Identifying the key elements of effective welcome correspondence to new leaseholders
- RTM companies: what additional steps need to be taken

W2: Leasehold Assignments – Who's Liable for the Arrears?

Trainer: Cassandra Zanelli – PMLS

Leasehold properties change hands on a regular basis. If there are service charges which haven't been settled, what happens to those arrears on any sale, transfer, or disposition? Who should be pursued: the outgoing leaseholder or the incoming one? And what procedure can (and should) be followed? In this webinar, we'll explore the practicalities of dealing with arrears of service charges when leasehold properties are assigned.

Spring/Summer Date – Date TBC

W9: Dealing With Property Transfers

Trainer: Cassandra Zanelli – PMLS

During the life of a lease, the leasehold interest is likely to be sold, transferred or otherwise disposed of. The lease will set out the requirements that outgoing (and incoming) lessees need to adhere to.

In this one-hour webinar we'll explore the typical requirements found in leases and consider how managing agents should approach and enforce compliance with those requirements.
